LXP Announces Personnel Additions to Its Business Operations Support and e-Commerce Groups

PITTSBURGH – Leveraged Execution Providers (LXP) today announced the additions of John Lyons as transportation manager in its Business Operations Support Group and Tracy Ott as EDI Coordinator in its e-Commerce Group.

Lyons is responsible for supporting various key transportation activities related to the rollouts of Phases II and III of the McDonald's Freight Optimization Initiative. He has 22 years of transportation management experience, and he most recently served as transportation operations manager for Campbell Soup Co. He also has held transportation management positions with Gardner Denver, Playtex Products and Werner Co. Lyons holds a bachelor's degree in business logistics from Pennsylvania State University.

Ott is responsible for supporting the development and implementation of targeted e-commerce capabilities related to the McDonald's managed freight initiative. She has extensive knowledge of the McDonald's system acquired in previous positions with Hub One Logistics, where she most recently served as a customer service representative. Ott holds a bachelor's degree in information technology from the University of Phoenix.

"John and Tracy bring valuable capabilities and experience to the LXP team," said Paul Newbourne, vice president of network operations for LXP. "Their services will be vital as we accelerate implementation of the McDonald's managed freight initiative, and they will help ensure our success in meeting all of the objectives of the initiative."

As the foundation for the McDonald's Freight Optimization Initiative, LXP serves as the lead logistics provider for the McDonald's USA transportation network. The company is responsible for planning a wide-ranging program designed to centralize and optimize the management of McDonald's domestic freight.

Based in Pittsburgh, Leveraged Execution Providers is a wholly owned subsidiary of Armada Supply Chain Solutions. LXP develops, implements and manages customized supply chain solutions that drive operating efficiencies for its customers.
